

members of her staff performing CPR and noticed that members of the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department had arrived.

Cara Di Massa told investigators that Victim Forbes was six years old and therefore with other kids in the four to six year old age group at the pool. She explained that the camp allowed the kids to decide what activities they wanted to do throughout the day. By doing this, the campers were not with the same counselor all day. Victim Forbes chose to go to swimming on the day of the incident and at the time she was in the pool, Cara Di Massa was told by her staff that there were approximately 30 children in the pool. She added that the capacity of the pool was 75 children. She added that the camp typically has a ratio of one counselor for every ten children. However, the camp increased the number of counselors to children when it came to swimming. On the day of the incident there were four counselors assigned to supervise the four to six year olds in the pool. The counselors were Joseph Natalizio, Hank Rainey, Faith Porter and Natalie Del Casatillo. Cara Di Masa explained that only counselors with Lifeguard/CPR certifications were allowed to supervise the campers when they were in the pool. She added that Henry Rainey was in the pool when the incident occurred and assigned to supervise the children assigned to the "steps" and that Joseph Natalizio was the senior counselor at the pool and assigned to sit in the lifeguard chair. Cara Di Massa told investigators that she would keep track of the campers swim designations in a book that was kept in the office. She also told investigators that the majority of the "K-6" age group started camp at 0900 hours and stayed until 1500 hours and 2019 was Victim Forbes' first year attending the camp. She added that parents would apply online and in the application, parents do not comment on their children's swimming abilities. She preferred to have the camp counselors assess the children's swimming abilities themselves.
